How To Tell If Your Ex Really Wants You Back

If your ex is showing you a little bit of interest, or seems more interested in going out and spending time with you than before, or if you notice signs that your ex is trying to flirt with you, then it's okay to be a little hopeful but you need to avoid jumping the gun.

These are definitely very common signs that your ex is interested in getting you back. But even if you want to get back with your ex, you should not simply jump into things.

The best way to play things is to play hard to get (in moderation), which is probably what your ex will best respond to anyway. If you simply jump into things full force, then you may find your ex pushing you back again. In fact, if your ex is giving indications that he or she wants you back, then the odds are, it was you playing hard to get that led to the renewed interest in the first place.

Usually when you break up with your ex, or, he or she breaks up with you, there is a natural level of missing each other, or longing to get back together. This is especially true following a relationship of a year or longer.

Your ex is probably going to miss you no matter what, because of how many memories you shared together during this period of time. But there are other emotions that come into play, including past regrets. If you are wondering "does my ex want to get back with me" the odds are that your ex may be thinking the same thing for the same reasons.

Sometimes, when an ex shows interest again following a break up, it may only be a game. They may see that you love them, and they may simply be trying to get attention, without actually intending to get you back. So, unless your ex really seems genuinely interested in spending time with you, they may just be passing the time because they have no other prospects on the horizon. And, worst of all, they may see this as a way to get revenge for some perceived wrong. This is why it is important not to jump the gun, and why you should focus on evaluating the situation before you act on it.

Never Get Dumped Again!

Before you set out to rekindle that romance, let's make sure you never get dumped again. Whether it's by your ex, or by someone new, we don't ever want to see you in a huddled heap again!

- Be the Princess (or Prince) that you know you are – Pick yourself up and get yourself cleaned up. Make yourself an appointment and get your hair and nails done, and throw in that pedicure, too. Pamper yourself. Have a massage or a spa day. You guys can get in on this too. Everyone feels better with a little pampering. Take some time to love and pamper yourself. If you don't treat yourself well, how can you expect someone else too?
- Whether you're dealing with the ex here, or someone new, girls, do not ask, call or pay when it comes to the date. No matter how badly you want that date to happen, if he isn't the one to do the asking he will never truly value you. Men operate under the assumption that anything worth having has to be fought for. If you hand it to them, even if it's on a silver platter, they will never consider it valuable. No matter how long you manage to make this relationship last, at some point, he will dump you.
- Even after you've started dating the ex again, keep a spare and a pair. It's going to take some time for you and your ex to get back to being exclusive again, if you decide that's what you want. Keep yourself occupied by dating 3 people at the same time. Dating only your ex will immediately put you back into that “possessive” routine. Dating only 2 will allow you too much spare time to be obsessed about the ex. And dating 4 will be too much to juggle. Three is the perfect number – you've always got a date, you're always occupied and having fun, and...your ex will soon become very jealous of the other two! See how much control you've gained already?
- Do not accept a date that hasn't been made at least 48 hours in advance. He needs to know that your time is valuable and that you are highly in demand. And guys, any girl that will accept a last minute date with you is only using you to bide her time. You will eventually be dumped.

- Ladies, the quickest way to become a dumpee is to be the first to say “I Love You”. Yes, I know how easy it is to let it slip. But, believe me, he knows. And he loves you, too. He's just too afraid to say it yet. And if you say it first, you'll scare him to death. Guys, the quickest way for YOU to get dumped is to put off saying “I Love You”. Oh, she doesn't want to hear it on the first date. And not on the second either. But if she's doing your laundry and cleaning your house and you still haven't told her,.....
